11 UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
13 Plaintiff/Respondent,
14 v.
15 MARIA CONCHITA HERNANDEZ, Defendant/Petitioner.

CIVIL CASE NO. 07cv2355 J
CRIM CASE NO. 96cr1262 J

ORDER DENYING PETITION FOR WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS

16 On December 14, 2007, Petitioner Maria Conchita Hernandez (“Petitioner”), a 17 federal prisoner proceeding pro se, filed a Motion to vacate, set aside, or correct her 18 sentence pursuant to 28 U.S. § 2255. [Doc. No. 88.] After consideration of the Petitioner’s 19 Motion, Respondent’s Response and Opposition, and the all the supporting documents 20 submitted, this Court DENIES the motion to vacate, set aside, or correct the sentence.

21 Factual Background

22 On or around May 24, 1996, Petitioner and her common-law-husband, Socorro J.
23 Cabrera-Borja, drove a 1989 Nissan Sentra from Santa Ana, California to Tijuana, Mexico
24 to pick up a 1988 GMC van. [Doc. No. 14.] Upon their arrival, Petitioner’s husband 25 entered the 1988 GMC van, which contained approximately 39.05 pounds of ampehtamine, 26 15.05 pounds of marijuana and 5.52 pounds of heroin. [Id.] Afterwards, Petitioner
27 Hernandez drove the 1989 Nissan Sentra back to the United States in advance of the 1988 28 GMC van. [Id.] Meanwhile, Petitioner’s husband drove the 1988 GMC van containing the 1 drugs into the United States at which point they were detained by border patrol officers.

2 [Id.]

3 Procedural Background

4 On August 28, 1996, an eight count superceding indictment was filed charging 5 Petitioner with Conspiracy to Import Amphetamine, Marijuana, and Heroin, in violation of 6 21 U.S.C. §§ 952, 960, and 963; Aiding and Abetting Importation of Amphetamine, 7 Marijuana, and Heroin (3 separate counts), in violation of 21 U.S.C. §§ 952 and 960, and 8 18 U.S.C. §2; Conspiracy to Possess Amphetamine, Marijuana, and Heroin, in violation of 9 21 U.S.C. §§ 846, and 841(a)(1)960; and Aiding and Abetting Possession of Amphetamine, 10 Marijuana, and Heroin (3 separate counts), in violation of 21 U.S.C. § 841(a)(1) and 18 11 U.S.C. § 2. The statement of overt acts in the indictment included specific drug quantities: 12 39.05 lbs of amphetamine, 15.05 lbs of marijuana, and 5.52 lbs of heroin.

13 Petitioner's common-law husband and co-defendant, Socorro J. Cabrera-Borja, pled 14 guilty on December 2, 1996. He was sentenced to 151 months in custody on March 17, 15 1997.

16 Petitioner waived her right to a jury trial. [Doc. No. 40.] Following a bench trial, 17 Petitioner was convicted of all eight counts in the superceding indictment on December 4, 18 1996. On March 24, 2007, this Court sentenced Petitioner to 151 months for Counts 1, 2, 19 4, 5, 6, and 8, all to run concurrently, in addition to 60 months concurrent for Counts 3 and 20 7. [Doc. No. 60.] At that time, the Court advised Petitioner of her right to appeal "within 21 ten court days of the sentencing date." [Doc. No. 91.] Petitioner filed an appeal on August 22 12, 1998 (doc. no. 63) which the 9th Circuit denied as untimely on September 11, 1998
23 [Doc. No. 74].

24 Petitioner then filed this present motion on Dec 14, 2007 [doc. no. 88] contesting her 25 conviction on the following four grounds: (1) Ineffective Assistance of Counsel, (2) 26 Violation of Right to Appeal, (3) Violation of Plea Agreement, and (4) Violation of 27 Constitutional Rights.

28 Legal Standard

28 U.S.C. § 2255- Federal Habeas Corpus Petition

I. General Standard

Pursuant to the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act (“AEDPA”), “A prisoner in custody under sentence of a court . . . claiming . . . that the sentence was imposed in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States, . . . or that the sentence was in excess of the maximum authorized by law . . . may move the court which imposed the sentence to vacate, set aside or correct the sentence.” 28 U.S.C. § 2255. The AEDPA applies only to habeas petitions that were filed after its effective date (April 24, 1996). See Lindh v. Murphy, 521 U.S. 320, 326-27 (1997). Motions to contest the legality of a sentence must generally be filed under section 2255 in the court in which the petitioner was sentenced. See Hernandez v. Campbell, 204 F.3d 861, 864 (2000). “Section 2255 is available to prisoners claiming the right to be released from custody.” United States v. Thiele, 314 F.3d 399, 400 (9th Cir. 2002).

II. Evidentiary Hearing

A district court may not deny a section 2255 petition without a hearing “[u]nless the motion and the files and records of the case conclusively show that the prisoner is entitled to no relief.” 28 U.S.C. § 2255. In order for the petitioner to qualify for an evidentiary hearing, he must make “specific factual allegations which, if true, would entitle him to relief.” Baumann v. United States, 692 F.2d 565, 571 (9th Cir. 1982). “[N]o hearing is required if the allegations, ‘viewed against the record, either fail to state a claim for relief or are so palpably incredible or patently frivolous as to warrant summary dismissal.’” Shah v. United States, 878 F.2d 1156, 1158 (9th Cir. 1989) (citations omitted). An evidentiary hearing is unnecessary when the court has sufficient facts before it to fully and fairly rule on the merits of claims. Blackledge v. Allison, 431 U.S. 63, 74-81 (1977); see McDonald v. Johnson, 139 F.3d 1056, 1060 (5th Cir. 1998).

III. Pro Se Litigants

Pro se litigants’ pleadings are generally treated with greater leniency due to a lack of formal legal education. See Zichko v. Idaho, 247 F.3d 1015, 1020 (9th Cir. 2001). Nevertheless, a pro se litigant must provide the petitioner(s) with notice of whatever the petitioner allegedly did wrong. Brazil v. U.S. Dep't of Navy, 66 F.3d 193, 199 (9th Cir. 1995). Civil rights claims are also construed liberally. See Holley v. Crank, 400 F.3d 667, 674 (9th Cir. 2005); see also Bretz v. Kelman, 773 F.2d 1026, 1027 (9th Cir. 1985) (en banc) (holding that courts “have an obligation where the petitioner is pro se, particularly in civil rights cases, to construe the pleadings liberally and to afford the petitioner the benefit of any doubt”). However, a liberal interpretation cannot supply essential elements of the claim that were not initially pled. Ivey v. Bd. of Regents of Univ. of Ala, 673 F.2d 266, 268 (9th Cir. 1982).

Discussion

A. Petitioner’s § 2255 motion is time barred

1. AEDPA’s Statute of Limitations

AEDPA applies to Petitioner’s petition because she filed her habeas petition on December 14, 2007, after AEDPA’s enactment date of April 24, 1996. AEDPA imposes a one-year statute of limitations which begins to run from the latest of four possible dates:

- (1) the judgment of conviction becomes final; or
- (2) when the impediment to making a motion created by governmental action in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States is removed, if the movant was prevented from making a motion by such governmental action; or
- (3) when the right asserted was initially recognized by the Supreme Court, if that right has been newly recognized by the Supreme Court and made retroactively applicable to cases on collateral review; or
- (4) when the facts supporting the claim or claims presented could have been discovered through the exercise of due diligence. 28 U.S.C. § 2255(f); United States v. Battles, 362 F.3d 1195, 1196 (9th Cir. 2004)

See 28 U.S.C. §§ 2255 ¶6 (1)-(4).

For most cases, the statute of limitations begins “on the date on which the judgment becomes final.” United States v. Schwartz, 274 F.3d 1220, 1223 (9th Cir. 2001) (quoting 28 U.S.C. § 2255). The conviction becomes final, triggering the start of the statute of 1 limitations, under the following circumstances:

2 (1) If the movant pursues a direct appeal to the Court of Appeals and then files a 3 petition for writ of certiorari with the United States Supreme Court, the conviction 4 becomes final when the United States Supreme Court finally denies the writ or 5 issues a decision on the merits. See Schwartz, 274 F.3d at 1223

6 (2) If the movant pursues a direct appeal to the Court of Appeals but does not file a 7 petition for writ of certiorari with the United States Supreme Court, the 8 conviction becomes final when the time for filing such a petition elapses. See 9 Clay, 123 S. Ct. at 1079; United States v. Garcia, 210 F.3d 1058, 1060 (9th Cir.
10 2000).

11 (3) If the movant does not pursue a direct appeal to the Court of Appeals, the 12 conviction becomes final ten days after the entry of the district court's judgment or 13 order. See Schwartz, 274 F.3d at 1223 & n.1 (citing Fed. R. App. P. 4).

14 Petitioner filed the present petition contesting her conviction on December 14, 15 2007, more than ten years after judgment was entered against her on March 24, 1997.
16 None of the other alternative "start" dates for the statute of limitations provided under 17 section 2255 are applicable. Petitioner has not alleged that the Government, in violation of 18 the Constitution or laws of the United States, unlawfully prevented Petitioner from filing 19 her motion. Additionally, Petitioner does not contend that any rights she now asserts are 20 newly recognized by the Supreme Court and made retroactively applicable to her case on 21 collateral review. Finally, all facts supporting Petitioner's claims were already apparent or 22 could have been discovered through the exercise of due diligence at the close of her trial.

23 Therefore, the statute of limitations began to run once Petitioner's judgment of 24 conviction became final.¹ Petitioner failed to file any kind of direct appeal within ten days

26 ¹ "[T]he question of when a conviction becomes final, so as to start the running of the statute 27 of limitations under § 2244(d)(1)(A), is fundamentally different from the 28 question of how long the statute of limitations is tolled under § 2244(d)(2)." White v. Klitzkie, 281 F.3d 920, 924 (9th Cir. 2002).

1 following the Court's sentence.² Thus, the judgment became final on or around April 3, 2 1997.³ The statute of limitations expired one year later on April 3, 1998. Even expanding 3 the time frame in favor of the Petitioner to include the ten days Petitioner had to file a 4 notice of appeal and the time between her delivery of the petition to prison officials for 5 mailing and its actual filing, the one year limitation period for filing a §2255 motion has 6 passed.⁴

7 2. Equitable Tolling of the Statute of Limitations

8 Petitioner explains that she was “never aware that she can file a § 2255 petition to 9 present all her grounds to the court” and that “she was deprived of her Constitutional 10 Rights for not knowing the law of the United States and a one year period of limitations has 11 pass [sic].” [Doc. No. 88.] The Court construes this as an argument that the time line 12 imposed by the statute of limitations should be equitably tolled. Whether or not equitable 13 tolling applies to 28 U.S.C. § 2255 motions is an open question. See United States v.
 14 Schwartz, 274 F.3d 1220, 1224 n.4 (9th Cir. 2001). However, assuming that it does apply 15 to the present petition, equitable tolling is permitted only in limited situations. Courts “will 16 permit equitable tolling of AEDPA's limitations period only if extraordinary circumstances 17 beyond a prisoner's control make it impossible to file a petition on time.” Miles v. Prunty, 18 187 F.3d 1104, 1107 (9th Cir. 1999) (holding that equitable tolling may be appropriate 19 “[w]hen external forces, rather than a petitioner's lack of diligence, account for the failure

21 ² The Court explicitly told Petitioner during her sentencing hearing, “I would advise you that 22 if you desire to appeal the judgment of the court in this matter, you have to file that notice of appeal 23 within ten days of today's date.” [Doc. No. 91 at 29.]

24 ³ Petitioner filed an appeal with the court on August 12, 1998 which the 9th Circuit denied as 25 untimely on November 13, 1998. [Doc. No. 74.] Even using this latter date as to when the judgment 26 became final for statute of limitations purposes, Petitioner's petition would still be barred.

27 ⁴ Under the prison “mail box” rule of Houston v. Lack, 487 U.S. 266 (1988), a habeas petition 28 is deemed filed at the time the prisoner delivers it to prison authorities for mailing to the clerk of the court.

1 to file a timely claim.”) Furthermore, the district court is in the best position to determine 2 whether a petitioner has shown extraordinary circumstances exist because the district court 3 can readily develop the facts and assess their legal significance. Whalem/Hunt v. Early, 4 233 F.3d 1146, 1148 (9th Cir. 2000).

5 Here, Petitioner has not offered any explanation constituting an extraordinary 6 circumstance that may warrant equitable tolling of the statute of limitations. As stated 7 earlier, Petitioner argues that she was unaware of her right to file either a direct appeal or a 8 motion under §2255. [Doc. No. 88.] Yet, ignorance of the law including the time limits 9 imposed by AEDPA does not entitle Petitioner to equitably toll the statute of limitations.
10 Rasberry v. Garcia, 448 F.3d 1150, 1154 (9th Cir. 2006) (holding that “petitioner’s lack of 11 legal sophistication is not, by itself, an extraordinary circumstance warranting equitable 12 tolling.”) Petitioner’s lack of knowledge of the procedural time limits imposed should not 13 undermine Congress’ intent to ensure the finality of court judgments.

14 Petitioner has not shown what circumstances, if any, were beyond her control 15 preventing her from filing her §2255 motion within the one-year statute of limitations.
16 Although Petitioner cites her lack of understanding of the United States criminal system 17 and poor comprehension of the English language [doc. no. 88.], neither absolutely 18 prevented her from filing her motion. Petitioner’s lack of legal knowledge or English 19 language fluency are difficult obstacles no doubt, but they are not extraordinary 20 circumstances entirely beyond her control. She has not claimed, for instance, that she was 21 deprived of access to relevant legal research materials or repeatedly denied writing 22 materials with which to draft her petition. See Roy v. Lampert, 465 F.3d 964, 974 (9th Cir.
23 2006) (holding that Petitioner’s claim of an inadequate prison law library lacking AEDPA 24 statutes and case law, if true, would justify equitable tolling of the statute of limitations 25 because it constitutes an extraordinary circumstance beyond the petitioner’s control.)
26 Additionally, Petitioner’s difficulties are hardly extraordinary as many incarcerated 27 prisoners must overcome the same language and education barriers.

28 In addition to her lack of knowledge, Petitioner claims that her counsel was ineffective and told her “there was nothing else to do” as a possible excuse for her failure to 1 file timely. [Doc. No. 88.] This too, however, does not constitute extraordinary 2 circumstances that would justify equitable tolling of the statute of limitations. Normally, 3 ineffective assistance of counsel does not sufficiently constitute an extraordinary 4 circumstance. Frye v. Hickman, 273 F.3d 1144, 1146 (9th Cir. 2001) (holding that 5 Counsel's miscalculation of the statute of limitations and general negligence did not 6 constitute extraordinary circumstances sufficient to warrant equitable tolling.) In addition, 7 the 9th Circuit, in its denial of Petitioner's direct appeal, specifically alerted Petitioner that 8 her claim would be more appropriately addressed in a collateral attack under 28 U.S.C. § 9 2255. [Doc. No. 74.]⁵ Even after the court's warning, Petitioner waited years later until 10 2007 to file her post-conviction petition to raise her claim of ineffective assistance of 11 counsel. [Doc. No. 88.]

12 Because Petitioner has not shown extraordinary circumstances prevented her from 13 filing her habeas petition on time, she is not entitled to equitable tolling and therefore her 14 petition is barred by AEDPA's statute of limitations.

15 B. Petitioner is not entitled to an evidentiary hearing

16 In the present case, no evidentiary hearing is merited because Petitioner's petition 17 rests on legal arguments that do not require resolution of any factual disputes. In order for 18 Petitioner to qualify for an evidentiary hearing, she must "make specific factual allegations 19 which, if true, would entitle [her] to relief." Bauman v. United States, 692 F.2d 565, 571 20 (9th Cir. 1982). Petitioner has not made any new factual allegations or provided new 21 factual evidence to contest her conviction. She has not, for instance, claimed that she did 22 not actually transport illegal drugs into the United States. Even so, putting aside the factual 23 merits of Petitioner's claims, the record is still sufficiently developed and factually 24 uncontested for the Court to make its ruling regarding the applicability of the statute of 26 ⁵ A petitioner challenging the effectiveness of his or her defense counsel in a federal criminal 27 trial should do so by collaterally attacking the conviction under 28 U.S.C. § 2255 because the 28 resolution of ineffective assistance of counsel claims ordinarily require the development of facts outside the original record. United States v. Miskinis, 966 F.2d 1263, 1269 (9th Cir. 1992).

1 limitations.

2 Conclusion

3 For the reasons set forth above, the Court DENIES the Petitioner's motion for Writ 4 of Habeas Corpus pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2255.
